Peping to BAP: Comply or 'die'

By Thomas & Henson

MANILA, Philippines — The Philippine Basketball Association (PBA) is set to announce the results of the 2013 Commissioner's Cup (CC) Finals, which will determine the national champion. The PBA Commissioner, Nene Tamsy, has been vocal in his criticism of the Philippine Amateur Basketball Players' Association (BAP), demanding that they comply with the PBA's rules or face severe consequences.

Tamsy, who is also the president of the PBA, has been leading a campaign to unify the basketball community in the Philippines. He has been particularly vocal in his criticism of the BAP, which has been accused of operating as a parallel organization to the PBA. Tamsy has demanded that the BAP comply with the PBA's rules and regulations, or face the possibility of being declared an illegal organization.

Group to tap MILF in fight vs crime

By The Associated Press
A group of women in the United States is planning to launch a campaign to recruit more women into the military, saying it is the best way to fight crime and terrorism.

The group, called the "MILF" (Military In Law Enforcement Force), is a coalition of women's organizations and military groups. It was formed in 2004 and has since grown to include more than 100 organizations.

The group's goal is to increase the number of women in the military from 15 percent to 25 percent by 2010. It is also working to improve the pay and benefits for women in the military.

Gov't plan to hold on to Malampaya stake seen to benefit RP

By Regal L. Ho

MANILA, Philippines — The Philippine government's plan to hold on to its stake in the Malampaya gas field, despite the fact that the field is now producing gas, is seen to benefit the Philippines. The plan is to hold on to the stake until the field is fully developed and producing gas. The government is also planning to build a new gas pipeline to transport the gas from the field to the mainland. The plan is seen to benefit the Philippines because it will allow the country to produce its own gas and reduce its dependence on imported gas. The plan is also seen to benefit the Philippines because it will allow the country to generate revenue from the gas field. The plan is also seen to benefit the Philippines because it will allow the country to create jobs in the gas industry.

My summer beauty checklist

THE SUDDEN rise in temperature around the months of March and April has become my cue to (temporarily) overhaul my beauty habits.

Summer means two glorious months of sun, sea and sand—and 60 or so days of being at the mercy of UV damage.

Lora Gabol

Two glorious months of sun, sea, and sand—and 60 or so days of being at the mercy of UV damage.

Better be ready

A girl has to get ready for the onslaught. So, along with booking beach trips left and right, I find myself scouring store shelves for the best skincare under the sun—pun intended.

Here's what I found this year:

Block beauties

As far as I can remember, I've been packing bottles and bottles of Hawaiian Tropic SPF 45 to all of my beach trips I've gone to. I love its beach-y coconut smell so much, I am known to sniff from the bottle off-beach season to remind me of beautiful memories of paradise.

But since I want to get the darkest tan I could, I'm toting the lip balm version of this classic potion for now and am off to discovering the best tanning regimen that will protect me from the dangers of the sun as well.

I went on a road trip a la "The Simple Life" with my good friend Camille to the nearby shores of Nasugbu last Holy Week. We knew that two chicks + the beach = tons of sun care products, so we packed bottles and bottles of sunscreen and tan boosters to make sure we would be heading back to the city with at least half of Paris Hilton's tan.

What worked for me? I sprayed on Nivea Sun Spray SPF 30 on my still-white body and slathered on Shiseido Moisturizing Waterproof Sun Block SPF 38 for the face on my notoriously burn-prone cheeks before baking under the Batangas sun.

Being on the dusky side (and having already gotten a tan from a previous Boracay holiday), Camille could afford to rely on the lower SPF of Nivea Sun Oil SPF 4 on her body and Shu Uemura Total Defender SPF 25 on her face.

As a tanning oil, I used Home Spa's Extra Virgin Coconut Massage Oil over my 'screen, trying to duplicate the fabulous Bora tan I achieved last year with the help of the sidewalk variety you can purchase from the manangs on the island.

Needless to say, we both got beautifully golden results.

Mane attraction

My freshly-chopped 'do deserved the best care, so I made sure I brought along my trusty Kérastase Soleil Voile Protecteur, a deliciously-smelling protective oil spray that coats each and every strand of your hair and protects it from sun damage.

Camille's lush locks were given a hot-oil treat with Home Spa Extra Virgin Coco Oil and Honey Hair Therapy, an intense treatment that worked even better under the scorching rays of the sun (the heat naturally released its natural silkening powers).

After an ample amount of sand and saltwater on our strands, we washed the evidence off with Sunsilk's limited-edition refreshing shampoo with watermelon extracts. Yummy!

After-sun special

To soothe the preliminary redness sun exposure lends to my skin, I generously rubbed on Phytomer Apres-Soleil Soothing Milk, the most luxurious after-sun treat (take my word for it).

The best part? You can use it as an after-sun recovery leave-in conditioner for your hair as well. Camille, being the sun goddess that she is, opted for Lancôme Cool Comfort, a relaxing, cooling concoction that does not only reverse the drying effects of sun exposure, but boosts your Brazilian babe goodness as a light self tanner.

A genius spin-off of everyone's fave Flash Bronzer, it really does make your skin look more golden than the average under-the-sun tan.

Worth a shot

Nivea has a very competitive sun care line that has everything you need, whether you're
